Copper Colored Splotches.

There is only one cure for Contagious Blood Poison—the disease which has completely baffled the doctors. They are totally unable to cure it, and direct their efforts toward bottling the poison up in the blood and concealing it from view. S. S. S. cures the disease positively and permanently by forcing out every trace of the taint.

I was afflicted with a terrible blood disease, which was in spots at first, but afterwards spread all over my body. These soon broke out into sores, and it is easy to imagine the suffering I endured. Before I became convinced that the doctors could do no good, I had spent a hundred dollars, which was really thrown away. I then tried various patent medicines, but they did not reach the disease. When I had finished my first bottle of S. S. S. I was greatly improved and was delighted with the result. The large red splotches on my chest began to grow paler and smaller and before long disappeared entirely. I regained my lost weight, became stronger, and my appetite greatly improved. I was soon entirely well, and my skin as clear as a piece of glass.

IS NO POLITICIAN

Dewey Has No Desire to Become President of the United States.

He Thinks the Filipinos in the Course of Time Would Be Able to Govern Themselves—Gen. Otis Has Tried to Do Too Much.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—In an interview with the Evening Post Tuesday, Adm. Dewey, who arrived at New York Tuesday, in regard to the Philippines, among other things said:

"I thought that this thing in the Philippines would be over long before this, as it should have been. I can't imagine how they have stood out until now. Of course, there was a rainy season, and I suppose little was done. One great trouble out there has been that G. n. Otis has tried to do too much. I told him so. He wants to be general, governor, judge and everything else, to have hold of all the irons. No man can do this. This is the great trouble. It is enough for a man to do one thing, to be one thing, but when a man tries to do everything and be everything it is easy to imagine the result.

"The fight in the Philippines should be easily ended. The people had been so badly treated for such a length of time by the Spaniards that they are distrustful. This is the great difficulty in dealing with them. Where we have met them and they have been in such contact with us as to learn that we mean to treat them well; where they have seen that we mean what we say, there is no trouble. They stand by us all the time. All of them will learn this in time. They will get from under the influence of Aguinaldo, or rather those people who are behind Aguinaldo, who, as I said before, is a mere tool.

"Do I think the Filipinos are fit for self-government? Well, no; not just now. They probably will be in a little time. They are a very queer people—a very queer mixture—many of them are quite civilized and good people, but I do not think they are fit for self-government just yet. But when I say that, I must add at the same time that it is my candid opinion that they are more fitted for it than the Cubans; that they are a better people than the Cubans in every way. I do wish, however, that the whole business was settled, and I think that after a little the Filipinos will take kindly to us."

It was suggested to the admiral that the democratic slate had been settled with Adm. Dewey for the presidency and Gen. Wheeler for the vice presidency.

"Well," said the admiral, "we should make a pretty mess of it. Gen. Wheeler, of course, has had some training in the political school but then he is a West Pointer. I had forgotten that. He would want to run everything as he would a regiment, and of course, would make a splendid mess of it. You can not run a government as you would a regiment.

"Well, admiral," suggested the reporter, "it would not be such a change from the ship Olympia to the ship of state."

"Yes," said the admiral, "it would be a very great change. I am not a politician, I am a sailor; my training has been all that way. I am at home on board my ship. I know my business, or at least should know it, and I do not want to mix up in the affairs of government. I am perfectly satisfied to live and die a simple sailor, who tried to do his duty. I am not a politician. I can not make a speech even. I wish I could, but I have to be content with my lot."

Some one said just then to the admiral that his son was reported to have made the statement to the effect that his father was a dyed-in-the-wool republican.

The admiral laughed outright, and, turning around, pointed to a piece of wood laying on the deck some yards away, at the same time saying: "My son knows as much about what my politics are as that piece of stick."

The admiral would not say a word about the alleged interference of the German admiral, Diederichs, at Manila.

Colored Troops Mutiny.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, says that the colored miltaires at Jadsnith mutinied and declined to go to the front with the artillery.

WAR IS VERY NEAR.

Boers Arming, Equipping and Storing Supplies for a Long Struggle—Free State is Also Intent on War.

BLOEMFONTEIN, Sept. 28.—The volksraad of the Orange Free State has unanimously resolved to instruct the government to use every means to insure peace without violating the honor or independence of the Free State or the Transvaal. In a further resolution the volksraad declared its opinion that war would be criminal, but asserted that come what might the Free State would faithfully fulfill its obligations to the Transvaal in virtue of the existing political alliance.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily News says: "The pass of Laings Nek will be occupied Thursday with sufficient strength for present needs, under the belief that the Boers will attack Natal immediately hoping to forestall the landing of the Indian contingent.

Dispatches from Pretoria and Johannesburg speak of the probability of hostilities within a week. One correspondent says: "British subject will be given a certain period within which to quit the country. If they desire to remain they must make application to that effect and the application will be considered on its merits."

Another correspondent says: "Four thousand rifles and a quantity of ammunition just arrived at Johannesburg and are being distributed by the field cornets. The burghers of Pretoria, 4,000 in number, are equipped and awaiting the order to advance."

The Daily Telegraph publishes the following from its correspondent in Cape Town:

"I regret to note a universal opinion that war is very near. Everywhere the Boers are active and bellicose. They are arming, equipping and storing supplies for a protracted struggle."

The Transvaal government has failed in an attempt to purchase 10,000 sacks of wheat here, but Boer agents are scouring South Africa to buy provisions. Proof accumulates of the existence of a great Dutch conspiracy against British supremacy in South Africa. The Free State is believed to be involved, and there is no doubt that the Orange government is intent on war. Many Boers in the northern districts of Cape Colony are joining our probable enemy. The Dutch republics will together be able to muster 35,000 men, nearly all mounted. I learn that the Free State has decided to put 10,000 into the field.

At Liverpool it is asserted that the White Star steamer Britannic and other steamers have been engaged as transports to carry troops to South Africa.

ENDED BY SPRING.

Gen. Fred Funston, Former Colonel of the 20th Kansas, says the War in the Philippines Will Soon Be Over.

FORT SCOTT, Kas., Sept. 28.—Gen. Frederick Funston, formerly colonel of the 20th Kansas volunteers and now en route home from Manila in a letter received by a friend here Wednesday, predicts that the war in the Philippines will have been ended by spring.

Gen. Funston says: "I would really like to see the war through to the finish, not for the position I hold but because my fighting blood is up. I am confident that by spring it will be over. The indications are that a very aggressive campaign will be inaugurated this fall and they will have what they lacked before, 3,000 cavalry, absolutely indispensable in a guerilla war. Lord, wouldn't I like to command a cavalry brigade. I have never for a minute had any qualms as to the justice of this war. We are right and they are wrong."

"I hope that when they are conquered they will be made to feel for many years the iron hand of military rule, the only kind for which they are suited. I think the islands a most valuable acquisition. Their natural resources are almost beyond computation. From a strictly money standpoint, they are great."

THE PEACE CONGRESS.

Capt. Crozier, a Member, Talks Entertainingly of the Proceedings at The Hague—International Treaty.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Capt. Crozier, of the ordinance bureau, who was a member of the international conference at The Hague, has returned to his duties in the war department. Capt. Crozier talks entertainingly of the proceedings of the conference, and is well pleased with what was accomplished. He says that it was known as soon as the conference assembled that there could be nothing done regarding the decrease of armies, and the cessation of invention and progress in the matter of offensive and defensive warfare, but the subject was considered and given attention, though nothing approaching an agreement was ever reached.

To Capt. Crozier the most important and interesting feature of the conference which was agreed upon is the treaty for an international code of civilized warfare. The basis of the code was the celebrated order No. 100, issued in 1863 by the United States during the civil war, in which a code for the treatment of prisoners, non-combatants, spies, women, church and property was provided.

The most serious point of difference in this matter was the treatment of those citizens in an invaded country who, without officers, organization or uniform, fought in defense of their homes and country. The smaller nations of the continent, and England especially, contended for the right of such persons to treatment as legitimate soldiers of the nation to which they belonged. On the other hand, the strong military governments maintained that only soldiers in uniform, properly officered and armed, should receive treatment of soldiers and all others be subject to be shot as guerillas without quarter. It was finally decided that men in an invaded country should be considered as soldiers if they complied with these provisions: Were organized under a responsible officer; carried guns openly; wore some distinctive badge or emblem and observed the laws and customs of war. These regulations are not required in case of sudden invasion, so that they can not be complied with, provided the combatants observed the laws and customs of war.

The protection of non-combatants, of women and children and of property is provided for. The treatment of and definition of spies is one of the articles. "Works of art are no longer considered spoils of war and are not to be carried away or destroyed. The destruction of public buildings and other public property is not allowed unless it is absolutely necessary for military purposes. Private property is not to be seized and held except in cases of necessity and is not to be taken unless absolutely needed; church property is to be respected and the rules of the Red Cross now used on land are extended to maritime warfare. While nearly all the delegates agreed that there should be more humaneness in warfare, there were disagreements at times which made the subject difficult to adjust.

However, an earnest desire to reach an agreement finally prevailed with the result that a treaty was drawn which received the support of all the representatives of the nations present. The action of the United States in taking the lead in the matter of humaneness in warfare back in 1863, was favorably commented on by a number of the delegates.

MUST STOP MOBILIZING.

England Will Be Notified That It Will Be Regarded as an Unfriendly Act by the Transvaal Government.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—A special dispatch from Pretoria says that the members of the volksraad, believing that the British notes are intended to gain time for the concentration of troops, urge the government to adjourn the raad immediately and to send Great Britain a note declaring that further mobilization will be regarded as an unfriendly act.

Trenches, earthworks and sand bag defenses are being erected in all available approaches to the capital.

CAPE TOWN, Sept. 26.—It is reported from Pretoria that Commandant Gen. Piet Joubert reckons on 18,000 Transvaal troops, 16,000 from the Orange Free State, 8,000 from Cape Colony, 2,000 from Natal and 6,000 Hollanders, German and others.

Publicly Shot.

BELGRADE, Sept. 26.—Knezevic was shot publicly Monday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd for an alleged attempt on the king's life. In view of the absence of trustworthy evidence, the finding of the tribunal is the subject of general condemnation. After the sentences were read, Paisitch was informed that King Alexander had pardoned him.

The 26th Regiment Sails for Manila.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—The 26th regiment, U. S. V., sailed Monday for Manila on the transport Grant. In addition to the 26th the Grant will carry 250 recruits of various regiments, together with nurses and hospital corps men, previously assigned to the Relief.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A daughter was born at midnight to the wife of Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr. Mrs. Vanderbilt arrived from Newport Sunday.

INDIAN WARFARE.

The Trouble With the Yaquis in Mexico Growing Worse Instead of Abating—Scattering Into Small Bands.

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 26.—Judging from reports that reached here Monday from Ortiz, state of Sonora, Mex., the Yaqui Indian warfare is rapidly growing worse instead of abating. Lieut. Majeran has arrived at Torres on his way to the City of Mexico to make official reports as to the progress of the campaign. He says there has been no cessation in the warfare being waged against the Indians by the Mexican government. He reports that the Indians have scattered into small bands and are now vigorously waging a guerilla warfare and that the Mexican soldiers have adopted similar tactics and are also divided into small scouting parties, and that there are frequent engagements between the soldiers and the Indians. The Indians avoid open engagements with the soldiers, rather harassing them with attacks from secure positions in the mountains and along the rough mountain roads, not infrequently causing much loss of life among the soldiers, with little harm to themselves.

Gen. Torres, in command of the Mexican troops, asks the Mexican war department to send a force of rurales to assist him, as it is thought they can render very effective service against the Indians. The Yaquis hold the rurales in great dread, as they are their old-time enemies and a most formidable foe. During the past ten days a great many miners have arrived at Ortiz, having been driven out of the mountains by the threatening situation, and all bear tales of murder and bloodshed. Dozens of skirmish fights have resulted in a number of soldiers and Indians being killed, and several miners have lost their lives. Many of them have deserted paying mines in order to save their lives. The entire country tributary to the uprising is in a state of fermentation and all the Americans are leaving as rapidly as possible. Dividing the soldiers into small squads scatters the war over a wider range of mountain territory and every section of the Yaqui country is terrorized.

CAN NOT GO TO CHICAGO.

Owing to Illness of Mme. Diaz President Diaz Has Appointed Lie Ignacio Mariscal as His Representative.

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 26.—President Diaz can not go Chicago on account of the illness of Mme. Diaz. He has appointed Lie Ignacio Mariscal, minister of foreign relations, to go as his representative.

President Diaz Monday night expressed deep regret that he must forego the pleasure of the trip which he had looked forward to with keen desire. He had hoped to meet the leading men of the neighboring republic and felt that the occasion would be of much benefit to both countries. While the illness of Mme. Diaz has all along placed a degree of uncertainty about the plans of the president for his northern journey, it was hoped until Monday that her condition might improve sufficiently to allow President Diaz to be absent. So strong was this expectation that Monday the senate again took up the matter of the proposed visit and increased the amount of the appropriation for the expenses of the president and his party to $150,000 in gold. The former appropriation was $100,000 in silver. It was shortly after this action that the announcement of the change in President Diaz's plans was announced.

THE AMERICAN PRISONERS.

It is Reported That the Filipino Congress Has Resolved to Release 14 of Them Wednesday or Thursday.

MANILA, Sept. 26.—Two Englishmen who had been held by the insurgents since June have arrived at Angeles. They report that the Filipino congress has resolved that 14 American prisoners shall be surrendered on Wednesday or Thursday.

They have, however, no information as to the whereabouts of Capt. Charles M. Rockefeller, of the 19th infantry, who disappeared in April last and of whom no trace has been discovered.

They assert that three Americans who were captured by the rebels are acting as officers in the insurgent army.

Itching Burning Scaly Blotchy Humors Instantly Relieved and Speedily Cured by

Cuticura

The itching and burning I suffered in my feet and limbs for three years were terrible. At night they were worse and would keep me awake a greater part of the night. I consulted doctor after doctor, as I was travelling on the road most of my time, also one of our city doctors. None of the doctors knew what the trouble was. I got a lot of the different samples of the medicines I had been using. I found them of so many different kinds that I concluded I would have to go to a Cincinnati hospital before I would get relief. I had frequently been urged to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, but I had no faith in them. My wife finally prevailed upon me to try them. Presto! What a change! I am now cured, and it is a permanent cure. I feel like kicking some doctor or myself for suffering three years when I could have used CUTICURA remedies.

DEWEY HERE.

The Olympia Arrived at Sandy Hook Early Tuesday Morning Very Unexpectedly.

HERO OF MANILA HIGHLY HONORED.

The Triumphant Warrior, Returning From a Victorious Campaign, Received an Impressive Welcome.

Amid Boom of Great Guns the Olympia Took the Head of the Column of the Naval Parade—Adm. Howison Has Also Arrived.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The United States cruiser Olympia, with Adm. Dewey on board, arrived at Sandy Hook at 5:55 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Adm. Dewey's arrival Tuesday morning was a surprise, as he was not expected until Thursday.

The first shout of welcome was from the pilots and crew of pilot boat No. 7, 15 miles south of the Hook lightship. It happened to be Pilot John Peterson's turn, and at 5:30 a. m. he was put aboard the Olympia and brought her around the Hook into the lower bay.

Alluding to his arrival two days ahead of the time he was expected, Adm. Dewey said: "I am sorry that I am ahead of the schedule. The Olympia has been steaming at the rate of 10 knots an hour since we left Gibraltar. Several days ago we knew that we would arrive before Thursday unless we moderated our speed or went somewhere out of our course. Capt. Lamberton, Lieut. Brumby and I held a consultation.

"The consideration that really decided us to come into port was to give Capt. Lamberton a chance to clean up the ship before our voyage up the harbor. Capt. Lamberton and I am very proud of the Olympia and we wanted enough time at our anchorage to rub her down and make her look spick and span."

He then spent most of the morning looking over newspapers and receiving reporters. He was just finishing a midday breakfast when Sir Thomas Lipton called on him. With Sir Thomas were Dr. Mackey and other visiting Englishmen.

Adm. Dewey then had a succession of notable callers.

Rr. Adm. Sampson, with Capt. Chadwick, his chief of staff, and Lieut. Commander Winslow, his flag lieutenant, came on the Dolphin. When the dispatch boat was a mile away it began firing an admiral's salute, and the Olympia replied with a rear admiral's salute of 13 guns. The Dolphin anchored near the Olympia and Rr. Adm. Sampson and his staff went on board. They were received by Adm. Dewey, Capt. Lamberton, Lieut. Brumby and the officer of the deck, the full marine guard and band being paraded. The officers went to the admiral's cabin. Rr. Adm. Sampson said that he was delighted with the evident good health of Adm. Dewey, and he told the admiral that he looked much younger than most of the portraits made him out to be.

Dr. Sanborn, of the port physician's staff, visited the Olympia and looked at her papers. Eleven of the crew of 375 men have typhoid fever. Some of the cases are convalescent and all of them are of a mild type, according to Dr. Percy, the ship's surgeon. No one has died of the fever, and with this exception the sailors and marines are well.

The Admiral about 5 o'clock returned Sir Thomas Lipton's visit. Lieut. Brumby and the admiral's son, George G. Dewey, were with him. Sir Thomas met the admiral at the starboard gangway with his friends and the entire party went to the after cabin where the health of the admiral, the Shamrock and of course the Columbia were drunk amid enthusiasm.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Through frolicking white caps the Olympia moved majestically up the lower bay Wednesday and passed through the picturesque strait guarded by Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton, amid the booming of great guns, and there inside the city gates Adm. Dewey and his gallant train received the glorious, thunderous welcome of the steel-walled men-of-war as their stately ship glided up to her position at the head of the column, there to remain until the great naval parade starts on Friday.

Never, perhaps did a triumphant warrior returning from a victorious campaign receive a more impressive welcome. Although thousands upon thousands witnessed it from shore, balcony, window or housetop and the man-of-war anchorage at Tompkinsville, where the fleet lay fairly swarmed with tugs, yachts and steamers and every sort of harbor craft, all jet black with wild, cheering, exulting people, and the towering white walls of the city beyond were draped with a million welcoming flags.

Wednesday's greeting to Dewey was the greeting of his comrades of the navy. And it was eminently fitting that his comrades in arms should have the first chance at him whom the millions are willing to honor. The people will begin to get at him on Friday and Saturday. To outward appearances the welcome he received from the fleet was strictly professional. One can find the salutes, the trumpet flourishes, the drum ruffles, the parading of the marine guard and all the rest of the ceremonies done in his honor Wednesday subscribed in the naval regulations as due to one of his rank. But that only impressed the mind the more, because even naval regulations, rigorous and ilastic as they are, could not restrain the pent up enthusiasm when it broke forth, as it did occasionally in rounds of cheers, any more than it could the bellows of the skippers and the joy mad people among the excursion boats. Cheering is not permitted by the naval regulations aboard men of war, but no reproof followed Wednesday's breach of discipline.

Very early in the morning before Dewey left his anchorage inside Sandy Hook, Rr. Adm. Howison, commander of the South Atlantic squadron aboard his flagship the Chicago, which arrived outside Tuesday night, travel stained and weather-beaten after her journey of 21,000 miles around South Africa, foamed in past the Hook, expecting to join the North Atlantic squadron in receiving Dewey upon his arrival. As Howison rounded the Spit there right under his eye lay the Olympia. The surprise on the face of every man aboard the Chicago could be discerned without the aid of glasses. But surprise is not an emotion men in the navy indulge in long and Dewey's flag ship was no sooner recognized than preparations were made to give her the loudest and most hearty welcome ship could give. The sides were manned, the marine guard was paraded and 17 roaring guns were loosed in honor of Dewey. The Chicago's jacks cheered wildly as she steamed past. The Olympia responded with 13 guns, and the two admirals, come together from two ends of the earth, waved a welcome to each other from the bridges of their respective vessels. The Chicago continued on to the upper bay, and upon arriving there was saluted by the New York.

flag, but as soon as the greetings had been exchanged, at Mr. Allen's request it was hauled down and Mr. Allen remained aboard as the private guest of the admiral. It was the desire of the navy department not to detract in any way from the honors to be accorded Dewey. An officer from Fort Hancock shortly afterward came aboard to convey the formal welcome of the army.

Viewed from the shore skirting either Staten Island or Bay Ridge, the Narrows took on the appearance Wednesday night of a big water fete, a venetian carnival. What might have been taken for a great canal was formed by revenue cutters and warships beginning with the Olympia at St. George and ending with the Onondaga lying off quarantine.

Between this line of beautifully lighted war ships and the Staten Island shore dartsed brilliantly illuminated launches carrying prettily gowned women and occasionally a party of naval officers resplendent in gold braided dress uniforms. The searchlights of the ships chased many of these elusive water grehounds as they scurried hither and thither in and out among the war ships, stopping at the gangway of one ship and then hurrying to another, the ladies begging at each to be permitted to go on board, and laughingly protesting when the obdurate officer of the watch talked of iron naval rules which forbade visitors on the ships after 4 o'clock.

The Olympia was the center of attraction. The varicolored lights used for signaling were kept constantly flashing from ship to ship, and at stated intervals a long succession of colored lights would flash out like a sudden display of fireworks when a number of vessels would simultaneously send messages to the guard ship.

The most unique illumination along the shores of the harbor was the effective display at quarantine boarding station above the Narrows. It consisted of the word "Welcome Home" in white electric lights with a border of red, white and blue lights and an

THE DEWEY CELEBRATION IN NEW YORK.

The bronze panel here shown has been presented to Admiral Dewey by the citizens of the city of Olympia and the state of Washington. It will be placed on the forward turret of the flagship Olympia, between the two big guns. It weighs 300 pounds, and is four feet high.

Only the flag ship of a squadron salutes upon the appearance of a rear admiral. The remainder of the fleet gave officially a silent welcome to the voyager. Long lines of crazy quilting, the universal language of the sea, fluttered from the signal halyards of the New York, Rr. Adm. Sampson's flag ship, and the Chicago, and after a good deal of wig wagging from the bridges of both ships, the Chicago dropped her anchor at the foot of the island close under the lee of Staten Island. Rr. Adm. Sampson's blue flag came down as soon as the Chicago found her berth. Rr. Adm. Howison is his senior, and to the main truck was hauled up the two starred pennant, which denoted that he was outranked. It was explained subsequently that the Chicago did not go to the head of the column, the position to which she was entitled, because the place had been reserved for the Olympia, and to have gone there would have forced Dewey's flag ship beyond the edge of the main ship canal. Rr. Adm. Sampson's gig was immediately lowered and he went aboard the Chicago to pay his official respects to his senior. The captains of the other ships, the Indiana, Massachusetts, Brooklyn, Texas and Lancaster followed suit, for naval etiquette is both prompt and exacting. Meantime the beautiful white yacht Dolphin with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Allen on board had hurried down to the Olympia. The Dolphin flew a white flag containing four stars with a fouled anchor in the field, the flag of the assistant secretary, and Mr. Allen personally was conveying to Adm. Dewey, the greetings and compliments of President McKinley. He went aboard in a launch and was received at the gangway by the admiral himself. The marine guard at present arms was mustered aft and as Mr. Allen came over the side drum ruffles and bugle flourishes sounded in his honor. When the assistant secretary of the navy goes aboard a warship the regulations prescribe that his flag be hoisted to the main top. Up went the immense American flag 14 feet by 25 feet, set in an illuminated frame of hundreds of white electric bulbs. This display was visible all over the bay and attracted the attention of all the ships.

Another unique illumination was placed on the slope overlooking the quarantine lock and consisted of a string of alternate American flags and pennants suspended from a center pole bearing three large are lights covered with red, white and blue globes. Very little red fire was burned Wednesday night, the coast residents preferring to wait until Friday night when the general illumination of the coast will take place.

THE ASIATIC PLAGUE.

It is a Microbic Disease That Is Perpetuated in Filthy Regions of China.

To many people the reports, a few years ago, of the appearance of the plague in China, and later in India, came with a shock of surprise. The plague was a disease associated in their minds with antiquity or the middle ages, and was thought to be one of the extinct scourges of man, as safely buried as any of its victims.

In reality, however, it has never died out. Although it retired from Europe, driven before the slowly improving cleanliness of modern civilization, it has been preserved through all these years in some of the almost inaccessible and indescribably filthy regions of western China and the neighboring countries of central Asia. It exists also in certain parts of central Africa, and a small epidemic prevailed in Astrakhan, in Russia, only about 20 years ago.

Since 1894 we have heard constantly of the plague in the seaport towns of China and in India, chiefly in Bombay, and now it has reached Mecca, and has been brought thence to the shores of the Mediterranean by returning Mohammedan pilgrims.

The plague is a microbic disease. It thrives in filth and in the generally unsanitary conditions associated with the crowding together of human beings in small and dark habitations. Rats suffer from it, and are believed to be instrumental in its spread. Fleas are also charged with transporting the virus from the sick to the well.

It is called the bubonic plague because of the swelling of glands in the groin or armpits, which is one of its chief and most constant symptoms. The disease begins like all fevers, with headache, loss of appetite, nausea, indefinite pains in the muscles and bones, lassitude, a chilly sensation, and so forth; but the sign which enables the sufferer to foretell his fate with almost absolute certainty is tenderness on pressure under the arms and in the groin, the forerunner of glandular swelling.

There is little to do for one who has the disease, but much can be done to prevent it. It cannot thrive in sunlight and cleanliness, and an extensive epidemic could not prevail in any city where modern sanitary regulations are enforced.

The "pneumonic" plague, from which several persons died in Vienna last year, is a form of the plague which attacks the lungs chiefly, the symptoms being in many respects very similar to those of ordinary pneumonia. This form is exceedingly fatal, almost every case ending in death. Of sufferers from the bubonic plague about eight out of ten die.—Youth's Companion.

BURROWING BIRDS.

Some That Are Remarkable for Their Power of Flight Nest in the Earth.

If wingless birds, unable to place their nest or gain security for their sitting mate and her brood on trees or precipices, took to burrowing in the earth they would be considered to be making an intelligent effort at self-preservation. But the burrowing birds are mainly species remarkable for their power of flight, and could choose any site they preferred to nest on. Even the puffins can fly away to the Mediterranean every year, and the kingfisher and sheldrake are both remarkable, the one for the velocity, the other for the sustained power, of its travel through the air. Sand martins, the smallest of our swallows, and the stormy petrels, the tiniest of web-footed birds, both choose to toil at mining the earth for a nesting place, though both belong to families famous for flight both over land and sea, and neither has the slightest especial equipment for such arduous labor. Other petrels, true ocean birds, and independent except at nesting time, of any element but air and sea, burrow in the earth by choice when the single egg is to be laid. It is not even a successful device. The capped petrel, now believed to be extinct, was killed off in its only breeding places, the islands of Guadalupe and Dominica, largely because it did burrow, and so was easily caught both by men and small carnivorous animals. Yet the zeal with which such tiny birds as the petrels or sand martins work at their tunnels shows that they believe them to be a necessity for success in life.

Early last spring a freshly arrived party of sand martins reached the mouth of the river Otter, in Devonshire, almost at the beginning of April and at once selected a bank just over the stream for an experiment in burrowing. The little birds were almost as tame as bees; possibly they were all young birds of the past year, and in the solitude of Libya had not yet learned any fear of man between the days of their leaving and returning to the banks of the Otter. They clustered and flittered like brown moths against the red earth, and competed for "claims" with gentle rivalry. Though they could hardly have recovered from the fatigue of their flight from Africa, their first thought was to select a site for this abnormal and unnecessary labor of excavation.—London Spectator.

Diamonds Made in Pipes.

Scattered over southern Africa are great pipes in which diamonds have been made, says Prof. Moisson. These pipes are made of blue ground. Each volcanic pipe (for their origin seems to have been volcanic) is the vent for its own special laboratory, a laboratory buried at greater depths than we have reached or are likely to reach; where the temperature is comparable with that of the electric furnace; where the pressure is fiercer than in our laboratories; where no oxygen is present and where masses of carbon-saturated iron have taken perhaps thousands of years to cool to solidifying.—N. NO FAKES NOW-A-DAYS.

What the People Demand Now is the Real Genuine Thing.

People now-a-days want to see the real thing. It does not make the slightest difference what it is so long as it is just what it is claimed to be. Of course, everybody remembers what the late P. T. Barnum said about the American people liking to be humbugged. If the old showman were alive now he would doubtless modify that statement. When he made it he was exploiting successfully Joyce Keta, the woolly horse, the What-is-it? and similar attractions that could not find a place in the side shows of to-day. A single imposture of that sort was enough for a whole show in the days when Barnum made his famous historic utterance. Even he lived long enough to regret the statement and in his latter days he frequently said to his friends privately that the utterance was a mistake, but it was too late to recall it. Now it is the best remembered thing he ever said.

No, the reverse of that statement is true now. The new, progressive showmen know it and they govern themselves accordingly. When a showman now says that his show is the largest show traveling it must be so or the public will know it and he will suffer a loss of patronage. Of course the public will tolerate any sort of a claim and say little if anything about it, but it is the truthful showman who makes the most money and that fact is being found out and followed.

As a plain matter of fact there can be only one largest show, and that is now the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Bros. consolidation. Before the consolidation there was only one other show in the country that was as large as either one of them and that was the Barnum & Bailey Show, which is now in Europe and will remain there indefinitely. Now that the two big shows have been united they are simply unrivalled in size or high character by any other show now existing, or that ever did exist in this country. They are the real thing in every detail, and this paper is willing to go a little out of its way in commending it to the patronage of this community when it comes here soon. The proprietors and managers are men of affairs with a reputation to sustain and their statements as to their concern are believed. They promise not the largest show ever brought here, but the best in point of genuine circus features ever seen, and that the exact, identical performance as given at Madison Square Garden, New York, will be presented in Paris, October 3.

A Hindoo believing in the transmigration of souls, ate no animal food, because in destroying even a worm he might be destroying the body occupied by an ancestor. A traveler coming upon the Brahmin taking his vegetable meal, told him it was impossible to avoid destruction of animal life and, to prove it, focused a microscope on the fruit the Brahmin was eating. That pious person drew back horrified at the living forms he saw. What did he do? Throw away the fruit? Not he! He smashed the microscope and went on with his meal.

There are people who are suffering with weak lungs. They have an obstinate cough, are weak, emaciated, hopeless. They have been taught there's no hope for them. Some one puts into their hands one of Dr. Pierce's books or advertisements and through this medium they see healthy, happy men and women, who declare that their lungs had been weak, they had been racked by coughs, had been emaciated, feeble, hopeless, and were positively and permanently cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. These cures can be numbered by scores of thousands.

Are you sick? Will you throw aside the advertisement, break the microscope, or will you make one effort for health?

Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y. There is no charge for consultation by letter. You'll get a prompt answer, with fatherly sympathy and medical skill combined.

Millinery To The Minute.

ALWAYS up to the minute in millinery matters, Mrs. M. Parker has just secured the newest creations in Fall style millinery for her fastidious patrons all over Bourbon and neighboring counties. Mrs. Parker's best trimmed hats are not surpassed anywhere in point of style and elegance. For people of quiet tastes she has always something to please even the most critical. The ladies are requested to attend her Fall displays next Friday and Saturday, Miss O'Rourke, the artistic trimmer, is with Mrs. Parker again this year.

The Street Fair.

The second annual Paris Free Street Fair began under gloomy skies Tuesday morning, but on Wednesday the skies cleared and for three days large crowds of good humored people enjoyed a continuous round of varied amusements. The fair began with the Industrial parade, which was as follows:

Richmond Band.
City officials in Carriages.
Grand Marshal and Aides.
Paris K. of P.
Winchester K. of P.
Fire Department.
Twin Bros' Float.
George Lyons' Float.
J. T. Hinton's Float.

R. J. Neely's Float.

Grand Marshal A. T. Forsyth and his aides, Newt. Clark, W. H. Davis, Mason Forsythe, Wallace Whaley and Ed Welsh, did excellent service.

Several exhibits in the Floral Hall were about the best ever seen in Bourbon. There were thirty-seven entries in the butter contest, twenty in salt rising bread, nineteen in tomato catsup, nineteen in yellow corn, and eighteen entries in the angel food cake contest.

Mrs. Lida Conway made an efficient Superintendent of the Floral Hall. Miss Ellen McCarthy was the capable secretary.

The Fremont Amusement Co. furnished the amusements. The balloon ascensions were the best features they gave.

The sideshow, the cane racks, the baby games, the squawking balloons, and the popcorn peddler were side attractions.

The hotels, restaurants and saloons reaped more benefit from the fair than any other lines of business.

The Winchester Knights of Pythias had a prominent position in the parade and made a fine showing. They were commanded by Capt. Bill Adams, formerly of this city.

Everybody is heaving a sigh of relief that the show is over.

Fall Millinery Hints.

JUST as New York looks to Redfern to give to the Four Hundred the latest dress fashions from France, just so the people of Bourbon and neighboring counties look to Mrs. Corne Watson to bring them from New York the newest ideas in fashionable millinery. Mrs. Watson has been true to the trust, for during her recent trip East she secured the very choicest patterns of Fall millinery on the market. These comprise many types of the millinery to be worn by the swaggers sets in the Eastern cities. Mrs. Watson also had an eye for the wants of those who prefer something less dashing, and bought something to please the taste of every customer. Her assistant trimmer this year is Miss Ella Kendrick, an accomplished lady from Chicago. The Fall displays will occur on next Friday and Saturday, October 6th and 7th.

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centered and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, skillful dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

SWEET IDLENESS.

The white dove circles in the sun,
The grapes lie purpling on the wall,
A blue mist rests upon the hills,
And God's peace broodeth over all.

Far out upon the cool, brown sands
The sea creeps in—a tired thing—
Trailing in long, slow, aimless sweep,
Its white foam like a wounded wing.

I watch the distant sails grow dim
As idly drifts my boat from shore,
And sigh: "O heart, the world is ours,
With life and love what need we more?"

CHAPTER XVII.

THE VATICAN.

The next morning I sought an interview with D'Amboise and stated to him what had occurred, proposing that I should leave Rome at once, and await his instructions at any point he should like. To my surprise, he did not regard the matter in so serious a light, saying that a small fine would not doubt settle the matter. "My dear cavalier," he said, "our lord does not desire the death of a sinner, but only his purse. Make your mind easy, but keep a tighter hand on your men."

"I shall assuredly do so, your eminence."

"Another thing. I think you will have to put aside your shyness, and attend me to the Vatican for the next few days. It is extraordinary how suspicious the court here is. They keep a constant watch on me, and on all the suite, and your seclusion, and solitary rides out, have been the subject of remark. The ladies too are taking interest in you. In fact, I have been specially asked to bring you with me, by Madonna Lucrezia, all owing to a foolish remark made by Strigonia."

"I am at your eminence's orders."

"It is a little risk, but I do not want them to think that you are anything but a mere member of my suite. If there were the slightest suspicion, all my plans would be upset, and the time is at hand now, a day or two at the outside."

"Thank God! I am eating my heart out here."

"Courage, cavalier! It will end soon. By the way, is Bayard right in saying you have enlisted St. Armande?"

"Yes, your eminence."

"Ciel! I should not have thought he would have been one for your purpose. But that is your affair," and he began to laugh.

"I have seven good swords behind me, your eminence. The cavalier may or may not do well; but I could hardly refuse his request."

D'Amboise made no answer, and our interview came to a close. I would, however, add here that nothing ever came of the burning of the inn. No complaint was ever laid, as far as I could find out, and the matter might have been an everyday occurrence, so little attention did it excite. I of course did not know that affairs had reached to such a pitch of disorder in Rome, and lived in hourly expectation, notwithstanding the cardinal's speech, of having considerable worry over the revengeful zeal of Jacopo. I took care that no such thing was likely to occur again, and Master Jacopo was penitent, swearing he would never give me further cause for annoyance. At the levee, that morning, St. Armande was, as usual, beside me, and I whispered to him to hold himself in readiness, as the time for our business was at hand.

"I am glad of that," he answered, his face lighting up.

"I attend the cardinal to-day to the Vatican," I said, by way of continuing the conversation.

"There will be much going on this evening," he made reply. "The Florentine envoy has been here for the past two days, and the affair at the Vatican to-night is in his honor. Do you know that you have excited great curiosity in the hearts of the court ladies?"

"Indeed? It is not my way."

"Is it not? Well, Lucrezia expressed a particular desire to see you."

"I trust it may not lead to the Tiber, cavalier. The attentions of the Lady Lucrezia are a trifle dangerous."

"His face became very grave."

"Be civil to her, nothing more," he whispered. "You are quite right. Oh, how I hate that place!"—and he shivered a little.

"Well, we will soon be out of it."

"Please God!"

There was no one at the high table at dinner that day, both the cardinal and Bayard having gone to dine with Sforza at the Sforza Cesari, quite an informal business, and none of the suite accompanied them.

The conversation at our table turned much on affairs, and as there were for once no guests, speech was very free.

"The flour-de-lis will cover our tongues," said Le Clerc, "and to-day we may let them wag."

"Then how long is this truce to last?" asked De Briconnet, the captain of the cardinal's guard. "I am sick of this idleness here," he added.

"As for that, no man knows whether it is peace or war," replied Le Clerc. "Tremouille is chafing at Passignano, swearing that the game was ours if we had only let him march on after Fossombrone, and he was right. Now Cesare has stamped out the Magione league, and the Borgia are as strong as ever."

"How came such a man as Roderigo Borgia ever to be made pope?" I asked.

Le Clerc laughed as he passed on the Urviolo.

"When our lord, the sainted Innocent, was called away, there were three favorites in the conclave. One was Giuliano della Rovere, the other Ascanio Sforza, and the third Roderigo Borgia. His eminence of St. Sabine was our man, and the election would have been certain had not Borgia and Ascanio joined hands and the Milanese voted for Roderigo."

"I did not think Sforza would have been so self-sacrificing," said De Briconnet.

"There were compensations, Jacques," Le Clerc went on. "Four mule-loads of gold were given to Ascanio, he was made vice-chancellor of the church, and given Borgia's own palace, the Cesari, where his eminence dined to-day. Immediately after the elections were made I was at the rota exchanging a few words with your uncle, the cardinal of St. Malo, and he told me that as soon as the result was known, 'We died turned the jaws of the wolf.' Heaven grant that he may not devour us!" As for Borgia he could do nothing but walk about, gazing out: "I am pope, pontiff, vicar of Christ!"

"I do not suppose it can last long," said De Briconnet.

"Heaven knows. He is close upon 71 and grows younger every day. He is as strong as he was thirty years ago. And there are few men who can sit a horse as he can, even now."

"That is true," I remarked, and gave the story of my meeting with the Borgia on the day of my arrival in Rome.

Shortly after this our dinner, where speech had been so free, broke up, and finding out the hour at which the cardinal would require my attendance, I took my book on falconry, and repaired to the garden, intending to pass the afternoon in its perusal. I made for the Lemon walk, and found a companion in Bran, who was wandering there in a disconsolate manner, evidently missing his master. I set myself down on a sheltered seat, Bran stretching out his length at my feet, his muzzle resting between his paws, and so we remained in quiet, the dog absolutely motionless, and I engaged in my book.

In this manner I passed my time until my lackey called me, in order to be ready to accompany the cardinal to the Vatican. After dressing, I descended the stairs and, mounting Castor, placed myself at the head of my men, and joined De Briconnet at the grand entrance of the palace. The captain of the cardinal's guard had his full force of 30 swordsmen, it being a reception night of some importance, and with great courtesy allowed me to place Jacopo and his six men in front of his troop, drawing his own horse alongside of mine, and discussing, with much cunning, of falconry, in which he was more than an adept.

We had to wait some little time for the cardinal, but at length he came, accompanied as usual by Bayard, and with him all the gentlemen of his suite, including St. Armande. On reaching the foot of the stairs, D'Amboise inquired somewhat sharply for me; but changed his tone to one of pleasant greeting when he saw I was in waiting.

"St. Dennis!" he exclaimed, "I thought you were not coming after all."

We had but a few yards to ride, and our passage along the Via Alessandrina to the Portone Brouse took but a few minutes. As we rode up there, we kept the obelisk in the center of the Piazza di St. Pietro to our left, and saw before us the walls of the new cathedral of St. Peter, then about four or five feet high, the ruins of the old church still standing around it. At the time I speak of, nothing had been done for about 50 years towards advancing the work, begun by Nicholas V., and the great design, afterwards altered and put into execution by Giuliano della Rovere, when he became pope as Julius II., was then in a skeleton form, looking more like the remains of some sacred shrine than the beginning of a new work, the 50 years of neglect having the effect of making the new work almost as ruinous as the old church founded by Constantine.

Although, as I have mentioned, there were no great doings at the Vatican that evening, there was no crowd assembled in the Piazza of St. Peter. It was full of soldiers, but the people of Rome, who might have been expected to be there in numbers, to see the procession of nobles and their followers, were conspicuous by their absence. Men-at-arms there were in store, jostling crowd of the commons, for a terror was on Rome, and men kept as far as possible from the Borgo. The piazza was, however, brilliantly lit up, and the bodyguards of the various nobles were strictly confined to the places assigned to them, order being maintained by about a thousand men of the Spanish guards of the pope, under the immediate command of De Leyva. The light from the lamps was reflected back by the glittering arms of the men, and the various ensigns of the great houses were distinctly visible. The single column of Colonna rose side by side with the eagle and griffin of Borgia, the six lions of Farnese trembled in the wind, near Colonna's two-headed lion, and a little in the background was drawn up a solid-looking body of cavalry, over whom fluttered the standard of the Borgia; these were Cesare's own lancers, as he called them, veterans of many a hard-fought field.

At the entrance steps we halted, and were met by two chamberlains, who, with their staffs of office in their hands, ushered us to the bronze gates, by which we were to enter the Vatican. We passed through amidst a blare of trumpets, each side of the passage being lined with pikemen, standing still and motionless as statues. Our way led to the Torre Borgia, the portion of the Vatican occupied by Alexander, and the distant strains of music caught our ears as we went on, and shortly entered the noble reception rooms, which were crowded with people.

The pope himself stood at the extreme end of the apartment, surrounded by a brilliant group of ladies and gentlemen, and as we came up to make our duty I had good opportunity of observing him. Alexander was fully 70 years of age, but so hale, hearty and strong-looking that he might easily have passed for a man of middle age. He was dressed as a private gentleman, in Spanish costume, with high boots, a jeweled dagger at his side and a smart velvet cap on his head. But the face itself struck me as remarkable to a degree. He was clean shaven, so that all the features were clearly discernible, the heavy, sensual chin, the wide, cruel mouth, surmounted by a nose almost Jewish in its curve, the retreating forehead bulging over the eyes, and the eyes themselves, in which there seemed to burn the fires of insatiable appetite and passion without end; all these combined together to make up a countenance which was a fitting mask for the evil soul within. I made my obeisance with all the others, stifling with difficulty a sudden desire to fling aside the hand I touched and walk out of the room.

I moved slightly aside, and watched the various groups as they wandered to and fro, or stood together conversing; and the hum of voices, the gay strain of music and the brilliant dresses made up together a scene well worth the looking at.

The Florentine ambassador was talking to the cardinal of Santa Susanna, a few feet from me. I caught the tones of his voice, and as he turned round our eyes met. Machiavelli, for it was he, glanced at me as at a perfect stranger, and then, slightly adjusting his purple-lined robe, moved slowly onwards with his companion.

"We mount yet higher, signore—excellence!"

The words were breathed rather than whispered into my ear, and Corte stood beside me.

"Excuse!" I repeated, with a smile, "but are you not putting your head in the lion's mouth?"

He smiled back upon me, more of a snarl than a smile. "The beast is gorged now. He will not think of me—see, there is some one coming your way—adieu!"

He turned and passed into the groups, and St. Armande touched my arm.

"You are to be presented to the Lady Lucrezia," he said, and the next moment I found myself bowing over the hand of one of the most beautiful, and certainly the most infamous woman of her age. She was barely 23; had already wedded three husbands, and was to become a wife again, and marry Alfonso of Ferrara. She was seated in a low lounge, and as I came up she extended her hand to me with a charming smile. Standing before her, looking at her large limpid eyes, at the small red bow of the lips, and the clear-cut features set in a mass of red gold hair, I could not imagine that the stories I had heard were true. It could not be that this fair young woman who stood before me had smilingly committed crimes of nameless horror. I could not believe it.

"So, cavalier, you have come to the court at last! I thought you were never going to do us that honor."

"His eminence of Strigonia said you meant to take the vows," and a lady, who was leaning over Lucrezia's seat, laughed as she put in these words. I recognized the peculiar unmusical laugh I had heard at the gate of St. Paul, and glanced at her with some interest.

"My sister-in-law, Giulia Farnese—Giulia Bella, is it not?" and Lucrezia touched her lightly on the arm.

"Oh, yes, Giulia Bella—and are you really going to become a hermit?"

"I might have had such thoughts until I came here," I said, "but I must now put them aside."

"Neatly turned, cavalier—St. Armande himself could not have put it better—sit here, cavalier," and Lucrezia made room for St. Armande on her lounge.

At this moment a commotion at the entrance attracted our attention, and a man walked up towards the pope. He was dressed in black, followed by two others, who walked up towards the pope. "Heaven!" said Lucrezia, "it is Cesare!" and a look that was not sisterly came over her face as she glanced at her brother, who moved slowly up the room, men falling away from each side of him, and greeting no one. He kept himself covered, and below his square velvet cap I saw a resolute face, the mouth and chin covered by a mustache and short beard, not so hidden, however, but that one could distinctly see against the dark hair on his face the full red line of the lips, set in a habitual sneer. Bad as the whole brood of the Borgia were, this was the worst of them all. He was as far beyond them in infamy as they were beyond the rest of mankind in evil doing. The very room was hushed into silence as he entered, and I watched with more interest than I can tell the stately figure of this wicked man as he went up to meet his only less wicked father. It was their first meeting since the murder of Pierrot, and Alexander, who stood in dread of his son, began to tremble violently as he approached looking this way and that, as if he would avoid him. At last they came together face to face, Cesare speaking no word, but lifting his cap with a low bow. Alexander almost made a motion as if he was wringing his hands; but recovered himself with an effort, and kissed his son on the cheek.

"So do the devils kiss," Lucrezia spoke these words under her breath, and I turned sharply round and looked at her. Her eyes fell beneath my glance of inquiry, and to raise some conversation I addressed Giulia Bella.

"So that is the duke of Valentinois?"

"Yes—and the man immediately behind him is Don Michelotto."

"The stranger?"

"You use strong terms, sir," the eyes of the Farnese flashed fire, and Lucrezia added, hurriedly:

"Hush, fool!—you are right—the stranger."

"Hush, fool!" and Giulia Bella laid her hand on her friend's shoulder. "See, they come this way—be cool!"

In fact, Cesare had turned from his father without either of them exchanging a word, and was coming directly towards us. On the way he passed a group consisting of D'Amboise, Bayard and the cardinal of Strigonia. Valentinois stopped, and, in his speechless way, held out his hand to Bayard, who merely bowed stiffly. Cesare's dark face whitened with rage, and dropping his hand to his side he walked straight on, and I could see that D'Amboise was expostulating with Bayard, and Strigonia openly laughing. This insult, however, had not added to Cesare's good temper; in fact, he came up to us angry as a man could be, and after greeting his sister coldly, turned to St. Armande and looked at him in silence.

"It is usual, signore," said Don Michelotto to the cavalier, "to stand in the presence of a prince."

"I was not aware that you were a prince, sir," replied St. Armande, entirely ignoring the Borgia.

"You can give this young gentleman a lesson in manners at your leisure," said Cesare. "By your leave, sir," and giving his hand to his sister, who took it passively, he led her to another apartment, followed by Giulia Bella, who tapped a good-bye on St. Armande's arm with her closed fan.

Our group now consisted of Michelotto and myself standing, and St. Armande still sitting comfortably in the lounge, evidently examining the contour of his small and shapely foot. As for me, although I knew St. Armande to be grossly in the wrong, I was delighted with the sudden spirit he had shown. The youngster had heart, after all, and there was the making of a man in him.

Michelotto behaved with great composure.

"I trust, signore—I do not know your name—that you will give me the chance of carrying out the duke's commands."

"My name is St. Armande," replied the cavalier; "and I am ready now, if you wish it."

"This is scarcely the place, signore; but the Vatican gardens are a few feet away. If you will meet me near the summer-house, in, say, half an hour from now, it would be a convenience. If we left together perhaps it would excite remark," and the Spaniard played with the inlaid gilt of his dagger.

"Very well."

Michelotto gave St. Armande a bow, made a slight inclination towards me, and strolled off. To all intents and purposes we might have been engaged in the most friendly of conversations.

"Well, cavalier," said St. Armande, looking up at me, "are you satisfied now?"

"I am satisfied, cavalier, that you are still too young to be trusted alone. If you wanted to pick a quarrel there was a hundre courses open to you; there are 50 other men with whom you might have crossed swords with no danger except to yourself, and you must needs insult Cesare, and get controlled with a cut-throat and risk our plans. Where is your prudence? But the wine is poured out now. You must drink."

His color kept coming and going. "I mean to fight it out. I shall step out in ten minutes, and await him. See! they are all gathering round the tables. What with the wine and the dice, no one will take heed who goes or who comes—good-bye!" and he held out his hand to me.

"Nonsense, man—you are not going alone. You will want a second."

"But not you," he replied, "anyone but you. You have work to do—not you, Savelli." His voice had almost a choke in it as he spoke.

"Come," I said, "put an end to this, or you will be run through the ribs. I am going with you."

He gave in with a feminine gesture of agreement.

"The business will not take long—" "It will take long enough, signore, if you go as you are going," and Corte stood beside us. "Signore," he added, "I have overheard every word of the scene. Do not go as you value your lives. If you do go, go with a strong party."

"Diavolo!" I exclaimed, "an affair of the dagger then!"

St. Armande looked from one to another of us in surprise. "This is a friend, cavalier," I said, "who has done us good service, and, turning to Corte, 'But we must meet the man—how on earth are we to do so in any force?'"

"Look around you," he made answer, "like master, like man—stroll out. You have some swords at your back. Take them with you; but better not go at all. Ah! I see my new master, the Camulengo, looking towards me—be wise and do not go," and Corte moved off to where the Cardinal Ascanio Sforza was seated, surrounded by a little group of courtiers and priests.

"Who is that man?" asked St. Armande.

"I met him under circumstances too long to tell you here," I said; "some other day you may hear all about him. We will, however, take his advice, and meet Don Michelotto with an extra sword or so at our backs." So saying I took his arm, and we strolled through the apartments, where everyone appeared to be giving full rein to his fancy. In fact, the beginning of an orgie had set in. Alexander, apparently recovered from the shock of meeting with his son, was at the gaming table, playing heavily, with Giulia Bella at his side. Bayard and Gonsalvo de Cordova were engaged in earnest converse with each other, and Strigonia and D'Amboise were cracking a flask of wine. I heard D'Este say as we passed him: "It is adieu to your eminence after to-night. I am a sheep fat enough for the shambles, and must look to my throat and my fleece."

"You would be wise, Strigonia," D'Amboise made answer; "if the shield of France did not cover me, I would not be here another hour. But it is an ill thing to lose a comrade such as you."

"To better times," and the prelate who could only eat drained his glass to the prelate who could both eat and drink.

WAKING A BOY.

When Mamma Calls There Is No Response, But When Papa Calls It's Different.

Did you ever try to wake a boy in the morning?

A certain woman of my acquaintance is sure that she has the dearest, sweetest and finest lad in existence, and yet I have seen her weep and wail, and almost gnash her teeth, because that same dear, sweet and fine lad would not, or could not, wake up in the morning. It is as good as a play to a non-interested onlooker, to witness the modus operandi with which she usually brings the young man to a realizing sense of his surroundings.

Just as the dawn is beginning to rub its sleepy eyes and take a peep above the coverlet of the eastern sky, she begins in this way:

"Darling, it is growing light; are you awake?"

No response.

"Dearest, come, it is morning; time to get up."

"My dear, it is morning, and you must get up."

A smothered groan under the bed-clothes.

"There, now, you are awake; come, mamma's darling, open your eyes and jump right up."

Silence.

A few moments of patient waiting.

"Rastus, did you hear me?"

Silence continues.

A smothered "Oh, dear!" and then a very determined voice explains:

"Rastus Bones, if you are not outside of that bed in two minutes, you'll hear something drop."

The seconds tick their steady round until 119 have passed down the valley of yesterdays, and then just as something very like a ponderous fist is ready to "drop," a lithe youngster springs to the floor, catches the uplifted hand and smoothes its owner in kisses, and for another morning "the" boy is awake.—Detroit Journal.

Periodical Stupidity.

Some of the greatest and wisest of men have had lapses into stupidity so marked that they are almost incredible. It is actual fact that Sir Isaac Newton caused two holes to be cut in the door of his library: one large, the other small. Being asked their use after completion by the carpenter, he replied that the large hole was for his favorite cat and the small one for her kitten. The carpenter naturally asked why they could not both come through the large hole, and Newton was overcome at the thought of his own lack of reasoning power.—Golden Days.

What Job Missed.

"Poor old Job! He had a hard time of it," said the man who reads up in Biblical history once in awhile.

"At least," said the man who always sees the bright side of things, "he was lucky enough to die before coon songs were invented."—Indianapolis Journal.

CHURNING MADE EASY.

To Change an Ordinary Dash Into a Crank Churn Is Not a Difficult Matter.

There are a large number of butter makers who will use only the old-fashioned dash churn, believing that it gives the best results, quality and quantity of butter considered. The great fault of the dash churn is the labor of operating it, so much of the exerted force of the operator being lost on account of no machinery to utilize it as in the crank churn. In Figs. 1 and 2, dash churns are converted into crank churns. In the device shown in Fig. 1 an old buggy wheel can be used for the fly-wheel. All the iron work, such as the crank shaft, bearings, pitman, etc., can be made by any blacksmith at a small expense.

FIG. 2.

The framework any farmer will be able to make himself. The two posts used in the first device need not be very large or heavy, but just wide enough to permit the wheel to turn inside of the two supports on which the bearings rest. In the second figure an iron fly-wheel such as is found on an old cider press is used. It is adapted to a small churn.—Orange Judd Farmer.

NEW PAVING MATERIAL.

Oakland, Cal., Is Trying an Experiment with Asphalt and Redwood Blocks Combined.

Fifteen or twenty years ago a good deal was heard of wood pavements for streets. They were quiet and smooth and fairly well suited to the residence districts of a city, but did not stand the wear and tear of heavy traffic very well. Then, when the blocks became worn and rotten, as they did, they absorbed disease germs and lessened the salubrity of the neighborhood. Of late wood pavements have gone out of fashion almost entirely. Something new in this line is now reported from Oakland, Cal., however, and it may prove so successful as to revolutionize the ideas of civil and sanitary engineers.

In Oakland the wear and tear comes on a layer of asphalt which covers the wood and not directly on the latter. The blocks are six inches square and four inches deep. They are laid on a bed of concrete, after having been soaked in hot asphalt. A mixture of hard asphalt and California liquid asphalt, in equal parts, raised to a temperature of between 350 and 400 degrees Fahrenheit, is employed. The interval during which immersion lasts is from three to five minutes. This treatment renders the blocks waterproof. They are then laid from curbstone to curbstone.

A mixture of asphalt and carbonate of lime is heated and poured upon the wood pavement. This is so soft a liquid that it runs down into all the interstices, and even works its way under the wood, if there are any holes there. Not until the fluid has been poured on three successive times is the surface properly covered and the spaces between the blocks well filled. Sand to the depth of a quarter of an inch is rolled into the asphalt when the last application has been made of the latter. The carpet thus formed has so hard a surface that it withstands ordinary light traffic for two or three years. It can be renewed at an expense of less than half a cent per square foot. Renewal seems to be necessary where redwood is used, but hard wood can remain bare for a longer time without injury.—N. Y. Tribune.

To Keep Out Tuberculosis.

In keeping the herd of dairy cows free from tuberculosis a few general rules at least should be observed. First, know that the herd is free from the disease. Then do not bring a new cow into the herd unless she has been first tested by tuberculin. If milk is taken to a creamery and skim-milk brought back, do not permit it to be used till it has been pasteurized. This will not only make it safe to feed to calves, but if it is fed to pigs will also prevent the disease being spread in that direction, which means its getting a foothold on the farm. Do not under any circumstances permit strange cattle to run in the pastures or occupy the stables. Above all, do not permit a consumptive person to take care of the cows.—Farmers' Review.

MACADAMIZED ROADS.

A Prominent L. A. W. Official Tells How They Should Be Constructed and Maintained.

"As the necessity for good roads increases, more frequent attempts are made by the country road builders to construct stone or macadam roads. Of course, some of this macadamizing is excellently done, but the great majority of cases are characterized by an utter want of that expert knowledge which is required for selecting the best materials and using them in the right way. Failures are especially numerous in respect to the methods adopted," says Otto Forner, chairman of the L. A. W. highway improvement committee.

"A stone road of any kind is necessarily expensive and a poorly constructed macadam road always means a waste of considerable funds. The subject is, therefore, deserving of especial study, and the farmers may be depended upon to familiarize themselves thoroughly with the principles which have governed this work, especially in New Jersey, where so much macadamizing has been done by state aid. We may expect that, in time, the construction of stone roads will become as familiar to farmers as the growing of wheat, but at present there is very little general information on the subject."

"The two points to be observed in building stone roads are, first, to provide a proper foundation, and, second, to roll and compact the stone metal with the utmost thoroughness. To begin with, the subsoil, which is to serve as a foundation for the stone, must be properly crowned, sloping down from the middle to each side of the road, and must then be rolled until it is absolutely hard and smooth. The road should take its shape from the shape of the foundation. The stone is but a covering or roof for the protection of the ground beneath."

"The stone used should be put down in layers not more than four inches thick, and it is well, where several layers of stone are used, to sort the material and to use the larger pieces for the lower layer. This sorting is done by means of a rotary screen attached to the rock crusher. In building macadam roads in Massachusetts and Ontario, the lower layer is usually composed of stone which will pass through a hole 2½ inches in diameter. The second layer usually consists of pieces which will pass through a 1½-inch hole."

"Rolling is the most important point in the treatment of macadam or stone roads. A heavy roller should always be used, heavy enough to wedge the pieces of stone firmly together. The roller accomplishes this by shifting the pieces about until each is lodged firmly between adjoining pieces, which readily explains the greater effectiveness of the heavy machine. Two things may prevent successful rolling: either the failure to provide a solid foundation, or the practice, which is very common, of spreading gravel or dirt over a layer of stone before it is rolled. The idea of using such a 'binder' is a bad mistake. In either event, the dirt or gravel, getting between the loose particles of stone, will prevent their becoming firmly wedged. A mixing of stone and earth, which is thus frequently brought about in an attempt to build a macadam road, is little better than an ordinary dirt road; indeed, it is inferior in some particulars. The material in a road thus constructed is sure to shift about under the pressure of narrow-tired wheels, which results in the larger pieces of stone working their way to the top, rendering the road rough and uncomfortable for travel. The best way to help the stone to 'bind' is to thoroughly sprinkle it with water before and during the rolling process. Almost every kind of stone has more or less cementing qualities, and its saturation with water while it is being rolled serves admirably to help unite the different pieces firmly. The second layer of stone is frequently of less thickness than the layer below. This layer should also be thoroughly and repeatedly rolled without the use of gravel or dirt as a supposed binder, and with the use of abundant water to help in cementing it. After the layers of stone are entirely completed and have been thoroughly rolled and packed, it is well to spread a layer of gravel, by way of top dressing, and to roll that thoroughly. Better still is to make this layer of stone screenings, which will unite better than gravel does. This dressing will prevent wearing the macadam road proper, and, as it disappears with use and travel, should be renewed from time to time, leaving the stone construction below absolutely perfect."

"A macadam road, properly built and with proper slope to each side, will readily drain off water and snow. The object of all road experts is to so construct a macadam road that water cannot permeate it. If water is allowed to find its way through the macadam road into the foundation below, it is sure to work mischief; and if the road is then subjected to any considerable pressure from the wheels of heavily-loaded wagons, it is certain to give way. Hence, the proper maintenance and care of a macadam road are as important as its proper construction. If once the road is damaged in this way, the work of destruction is bound to continue. It is, therefore, as important to prevent this first damage as it is to prevent the first small hole in a dam."

"Taxpayers, who are obliged to contribute to the cost of macadam roads, will do well to see to it that the work is properly done. The old adage that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well applies with irresistible force. Many of us still believe that we cannot afford, in the United States, to build first-class highways. It is even more emphatically true that we cannot afford to waste money in unsuccessful attempts at macadamizing."

GIRAFFES IN AFRICA.

A Few Specimens Have Been Found in the Central Part of the Dark Continent.

From time to time it has been rumored that giraffes existed in British Central Africa, on the Loangwa river, but, although that river valley has been frequently visited during the last ten years by Europeans, no authentic information on the point has ever been obtained, says the British Central African Gazette. Recently, however, a giraffe was shot on the east bank of the Loangwa, in the Marimba district, by a European prospector, and its skin (complete) sent in to Capt. Chichester, in Mpezeni's country. The hinder half of the skin is being sent to the British museum, and it is hoped that a complete specimen may now be obtained.

The existence of giraffes in Marimba is remarkable; the area in which they are found is extremely restricted, and their number appears to be very few. The one shot, however, was in a herd of about 35. The nearest country north of Marimba in which giraffes are known to exist is north of Mareres, where the Elton-Cotterill expedition met with them many years ago. To the south Matabeland is the nearest giraffe country.

FIFTY CENTS FOR NOTHING.

What will the inventive brain of man do next? This is a question some one asks almost daily. There is one, though, who leads all others, who for a quarter of a century has been making fine laundry starch; and to-day is offering the public the finest starch ever placed on the market.

Ask your grocer for a coupon book which will enable you to get the first two packages of this new starch, "RED CROSS" (trade mark brand) also two children's Shakespeare pictures, painted in twelve beautiful colors, natural as life, or the Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, all absolutely free. All grocers are authorized to give ten large packages of "RED CROSS STARCH" with twenty of the Shakespeare pictures or ten of the Twentieth Century Girl Calendars to the first five purchasers of the ENDLESS CHAIN STARCH BOOK. This is one of the greatest offers ever made to introduce "RED CROSS" laundry starch, J. C. Hubinger's latest invention.

Miss Proctor's Youthful Critics.

Miss Mary Proctor, the astronomer and lecturer, takes a deep interest in social settlement work in the big cities, and frequently gives her personal services toward entertaining poor children and adults. Generally her lectures are very well received. Many of her audiences often manifest better attention than those drawn from higher circles. Now and then there are exceptions. On one occasion a bright-eyed little boy who sat in the front row with his eyes fixed upon the speaker was asked how he liked it. "I guess," he said, "it was pretty good, but she ought to talk about lions and tigers. That's better for everybody." At another lecture a youngster criticized her as follows: "It's all very well to talk of weighing and measuring stars. There are some people, of course, who believe that sort of thing, but if she thinks she can fool us boys with such fairy tales she's very much mistaken."—Philadelphia Post.

The Best Man Wins.

Prize fighting may not be a pleasant subject, but it teaches a lesson nevertheless—the inability of man to hold the championship for any length of time. THE ills of women overshadow their whole lives.

Some women are constantly getting medical treatment and are never well. "A woman best understands women's ills," and the women who consult Mrs. Pinkham find in her counsel practical assistance. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

MRS. MABEL GOOD, Correctionville, Ia., tells how Mrs. Pinkham saved her life. She says:

"I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me. I can recommend it as one of the best medicines on earth for all women's ills. I suffered for two years with female weakness and at last became bedfast. Three of our best doctors did me no good so I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking a few bottles of your medicine, I was able to do all my housework. I know that your medicine raised me from a bed of sickness and perhaps death, and am very thankful for what it has done for me. I hope that every suffering woman may be persuaded to try your medicine."

Get Mrs. Pinkham's advice as soon as you begin to be puzzled. The sick headaches and dragging sensation come from a curable cause. Write for help as soon as they appear.

MRS. DOLE STANLEY, Campbellsville, Ind., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I was troubled with sick headache and was so weak and nervous, I could hardly go. A friend called upon me one evening and recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying that she knew that it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine and after taking five bottles of it, I was entirely cured. I cannot praise it enough."
